

MARGINALIA+LAB SELECTS RESIDENTS FOR 2011

Marginalia+Lab will select through international call, 3 residents to develop creation and experimentation works in art and technology through two months in the city of Belo Horizonte, Brazil. Of those, one will be local, one from other regions in the country and one Foreigner.

Submissions are online and will be open until February 1st 2011. To the selected artists, the program will offer space and physical structure to develop the work, a grant and food support, besides lodging for those from other places. The call is open to anyone willing to develop works in the field of interest of the lab, of any expertise.

Marginalia+Lab seeks, with this program, to promote opportunities for the deepening of aesthetical and technical researches, in a direct contact with the local community of artists and developers of many different fields. Thus, throughout the residency period, meetings, workshops and other interchange activities will be promoted with the participation of selected artists and open to the general public.

This call continues the proposal of the lab that, since 2009, stimulates the research in art and technology with activities that, beside residencies, include workshops, meetings, exhibitions and events. In 2010, Marginalia+Lab inaugurated its new space in the region of Santa Efigênia, Belo Horizonte, that now provides a fix space to hold its activities.

Details about the call and submission form may be found at www.marginalialab.com.

About Marginalia+Lab

Marginalia+Lab is a space for creation and research in art and technology. In a diverse program of activities, its main goal is to stimulate practices of experimentation, interchange and collaboration in this field, without restriction to particular media approaches.

Since 2010, Marginalia+Lab maintains, in Belo Horizonte, Brazil, its own space for the activities. In the region of Santa Efigênia, the lab has an area of approximately 120 square meters, being able to hold many different activities, from project development to discussions and presentations.

Active since 2009, Marginalia+Lab organizes workshops, meetings, and exhibitions, having already supported the development of many art and technology project, with the organization of residencies and events. The lab is also open to external activities proposals.

Marginalia+Lab was created by the initiative of Marginalia Project, art and technology collective from Belo Horizonte, as a space for the development of research and experimentation activities of the group itself. With the will to share this space with other proposals and initiatives, the lab soon expanded to its current design, through a partnership of the group with 88 Productions, art and audiovisual production company that works together with Marginalia Project in the management of this space and its activities.

The lab is sponsored by Vivo, through the State Law for Cultural Incentive, being part of Vivo Lab cultural program.
